The 75th Observance of the Nanking Massacre

*"To forget a Holocaust is to kill twice."
Elie Wiesel*

This year marks the 75th anniversary of the Nanking Massacre, when the Japanese Imperial Army brutally raped, tortured, and murdered more than 300,000 Chinese people. Horrific in intensity and scale, this atrocity remains relatively obscure in public awareness, while the memories and legacies of this history are alive today and continue to have a profound impact.

"Torn Memories of Nanking" –a documentary film with interviews of ex-Japanese soldiers and Chinese victims during WWII

Ms. Matsuoka Tamaki (松岡 環), a Japanese producer/director, on "Why I investigated both ex-soldiers and victims during Nanjing massacre"

Professor Lei Guang (光磊), IRPS,UCSD on 'History Memories and China -Japan relations'

Refreshments will be served. Public is welcome.
