Seven Point Loma High school students from Mr. Patrick McElhaney's history classes, Social Studies Department, won the Nanking Memorial Award. Professor Jen-Shih Lee, one of our board members represented APHAFIC to attend the banquet. These seven students were recognized for their reflection essays after watching the movie "Nanking. The event started with a parade of the Honor Guard for flag raising of this celebration. Professor Lee mentioned to the audience the mission of APHAFIC and awarded a certificate, a check of $50 and a pen memorabilia to each of five of the seven essay contest winners. Professor Lee had chance chatting with the five winners. The following questions are asked:

1. Have killings such as Nanking Massacre ever happened in the United States?
2. Do you think that Japanese made appropriate compensations to the victims of the war?
3. What Americans should do to help Chinese reconcile such horrendous atrocities?

Every winner gives me good answers to these questions. It is also their wish that such tragedy should never happen in their future.
